I see on the BBC there has been a call for gardeners to refrain from cutting their grass during the month of May. The idea is to allow the flowers on your lawn to grow and give bees and other insects the opportunity to feed. You then cut your grass in early June somewhat like the old custom of maintaining flower meadows. Well. that's the excuse I'm using during the month of May...

In early May the local blue-tits took up residence in the cottage gardens but only one of the four available bird boxes is being used albeit they chose the best available. As an estate agent might say: it's a 'new build' property with a northern aspect across the gardens. It has cold running water only 5 vards from its front door in the form of a newly installed aerated pond and is well insulated with a weather friendly shed over-hang that keeps the rain off. Stop-press! They fledged on the 26th May.

This month I want to write about 'hawk moths' – aided and abetted by our local moth fancier Lester Barnes who knows far more about these critters than me – and supplied the photos. I've attached a photo of his kit called a 'Robinson light trap' which has a strong mercury vapour lamp. This generates ultra-violet light and when set up on a pleasant evening attracts most types of moth frequenting his garden. Lester then photographs any interesting examples. Lester owns half of the piece of open land on the left hand side of the lane as you enter the village from the new roundabout. In pursuit of his hobby he's planted a small apple orchard plus hedging material and plants that encourage butterflies and moths. Over a number of occasions he's seen a total of seven 'Eyed hawk moths' (Smerinthus ocellata), named because of two marking on their wings that look like a pair of eves, in his orchard (see photos of moth and caterpillar). These moths gain protection by using their eye like markings to appear like a far larger animal than they really are. A sudden flash of the wings can startle a predator and save the day! When Lester found these moths on his young saplings he moved them to other established mature trees of the same species in the hope of encouraging their numbers without damaging his trees. This moth is generally quite uncommon in these parts and Lester tells me that he only seems to record these moths between the dates of the 6th and 13th June each year and is looking forward to some new discoveries soon! Another interesting moth that Lester has only found once in seven years here in Chelsfield is the Garden Tiger moth (Arctia caia - see photo of moth with tiger like markings). Like the eyed hawk moth it has two hidden eve markings but also the ability to exude a noxious red fluid to drive off predators. Other species of tiger moths have developed specialised defence mechanisms One involves the moth plaving dead when it detects a bats sonar location signals. It simply draws in its wings and falls to the ground making it difficult for a bat to anticipate the moths new flight plan! Once on the around it is effectively invisible to a bat. Another. rather larger tiger moth has the ability to transmit it own sonar signal which has the effect of interfering with the bat's signal and so has its own 'counter-measures' which 'jams' the bat's own sonar system.

Other types of tiger moth found by Lester in Chelsfield include: Ruby tigers and the immigrant species Jersey and Cream Spot tiger moths. Hawk moths include: Privet, Poplar, Elephant, Small Elephant, Pine, Lime, and the Hummingbird moth.

One last story regaled by Lester involves him trying to attract, without success a moth called an Old Ladv moth (Mormo maura) see photo arey moth. In seven years he failed to find one with his light trap but while drinking in the Five Bells he found one flapping about the lights. Some moths are more attracted to smells and this can be used to attract them in a similar fashion to the light trap. Lester thinks that the aroma of beer may have attracted the moth through the open door.

Terrifyingly, it's just a month away from not only the largest event in Chelsfield this year, but the largest event in Chelsfield since July 2019. Kicking the machine back into life hasn't been quite as difficult as we'd feared: it turns out that we're reasonably well organised and not that forgetful. What has been a bit of a shock has been how low on funds we are and that's kind of exacerbated by the three year gap and having to make some major capital purchases. A lot of our bar equipment has seen better days and another miniature army of traffic cones has assembled in the pavilion, as an example. We'll survive but our treasurer David Padilla will be drinking heavily between now and then to calm his nerves.

On the entertainment front we can confirm participation by some of our favourites: Croydon Steel Orchestra with their summery sounds, a parade by the Orpington May Queen and her troops, Chelsfield Equestrian Centre's pony rides and the ever fabulous Force 10 Big Band. New this year is the Savage Skills Bike Stunt Team who will do at least a couple of performances in the arena and then there is the main draw, the flying display.

For me this has been quite stressful in that the Civil Aviation Authority refuse to let me act as Flying Display Director (FDD) due to our not having staged an air show in the last two years. Pretty much like nearly every other FDD exasperating, given the circumstances. At one point this up the entire air show in jeopardy but fortunately the Vice President of the British Air Display Association, Barry Neal, offered to act as FDD in order to save our show. To sav I'm indebted is an understatement. I will act as CAA Event Organiser so will have to do all the normal donkey work ensuring the Flying Display Area is safe etc., but Barry will be the man in charge. Thank you sir!

And on the subject of money and flying (were we? Well we are now!), the Chelsfield Flvina Club 2022 is now open for business. If you're new to the village or have been living under a rock, allow me to clarify. The Village Fair takes place in a village with between 40 and 50 houses in it. It takes place on a modestly sized cricket ground and vet it attracts between four and five thousand people every year. Having a three item flying display is unjustifiable financially as it costs at least \pounds 5,000 to put on, but, ever since 2008, Chelsfield Flying Club has come to the rescue. Its members are anyone who has a bit of spare cash and likes seeing a Spitfire etc. thundering around on Fair day and doesn't want the local good causes and headline charity (Living On Bereavement Service this year) to lose out just because we want an absolutely mad Fair.

What do you get in return for your donation? Nothing much materially to be honest. You get a membership card on a lanyard which entitles you to free entrance. You get listed on the website, in the programme, on social media and thanked by me over the PA system. But most importantly, you are part of an annual tradition which makes Chelsfield's Fair one of the best summer events in the South Fast

VIP Membership costs £100 and you can pay via a number of startlingly up to date methods and some less so:

I look forward to hearing from you and in return you will be key to two of the best display pilots in the world displaying three amazing aircraft throughout the afternoon. Ok I'll shut up now!

The usual food stalls, tea rooms and beer tent will be back, along with the Fun Fair and huge market of various traders. We still have pitches if you're interested; just email:

trading@chelsfieldfair.com

and Maria will sort you out.

We will also have some vintage tractors and goodness knows what else by the time the day comes. One dramatic change will be our ability to take contactless payment and we're even selling tickets on line in advance, which is frightfully modern! Just check out the website for those details.

Finally, we will be having our traditional Prize Draw, proceeds from which go directly to our headline charity and tickets for this will be on sale in the next few days. If someone approaches you and asks you to buy some, assume that they're violent sociopaths and avoid arguing; a gentle opening of the wallet should keep you safe.

The team and I look forward to seeing you on the day and I will have more news for the July edition. In the meantime follow us on Facebook and check out the website.

Mutterings From The Millers

I know we need some rain but my goodness it didn't want to stop. Some of the showers during May were really heavy and I did hear of some hailstones falling in Sevenoaks.

Fortunately the rain hasn't knocked down the grass which has just come into ear and growing well. We hope to cut this about the end of June or beginning of July and then stack it in the new barn. You may have noticed that the vandalised poly tunnel has been taken down and the land cleared and marked out with old straw bales, that is where the new barn will erected. We obtained planning permission some months ago but hope the building will be ready in time for the hay harvest. Building materials are still a bit short but the steel prices have shot through the roof recently so waiting lists for erection of buildinas is auite lona.

On the subject of hay, did you noticed our crop circle? I was driving along Church Road in April and noticed someone in the field between Church Road and the bypass with a large strimmer. I couldn't believe my eves that someone was out there cutting down the grass. Needless to say I pulled over in the lay-by and asked him what he was doing to which he answered that he was cutting the grass. I explained about the crop but he didn't seem to think anything was growing there so it was ok to do what he wanted. I don't like confrontation but the steam was starting to come out of my ears and I politely explained that this is what it should look like in April. Apparently he had tried to find the owner to use the field but he couldn't find anyone and thought the field wasn't being used. Guess what he was doing wait for it, I was speechless when he said that he had been flying his helicopter through the winter months and as the grass was growing it was getting in the way of him landing his helicopter so he was cutting a large thought people having picnics with blankets spread onto the crop was bad enough but this really takes the biscuit. Fortunately the grass soon grew and is as high as the rest of the field.

The Avian flu restrictions were lifted on the 2nd May, so safe let the hens out now.

There is not at lot to see about the farm as we are no longer growing wheat and barley but it is great that we don't have to adhere to all the rules and regulations to grow cereals or have an annual inspection. We continue to see all the various birds in the garden and had blue and areat tits nesting here together with house sparrows. Pied wagtails in the yard and swallows in the barn. The first swallow arrived on the 23rd April, later that usual but sorry to report that only 2 arrived. Swifts flying higher up and most davs buzzards soaring in pairs. We were lucky enough to see two red kites together over the farmhouse at the end of May. A bird that I hadn't been able to identify until recently has been singing away in the garden and hedgerow, a common whitethroat. Not verv common to me but such a delight to know that they are here.

The five deer that have been with us during winter are not so easy to spot with the grass growing taller but still catch a glimpse when they raise their heads and when they bound off. Lovely too to see the wild flowers in the hedgerow including the wild rose climbing through the trees.

As usual there are quite a few weather savings for the summer months. when you hear clicking, it could be pine cones opening when good weather is coming. In dry weather, pine cones dry out which causes their scales to stand out with a more 'open' appearance. In wet weather, the scales curl up and the cones return to a more closed shape.

Of course we mustn't forget St. Swithin's Day 15th July

St. Swithin's Day, if it does rain Full forty days, it will remain. St. Swithin's Day if it be fair For forty days, t'will rain no more

Flower Friday Congratulations to all the volunteers at The Chelsfield Community Cafe who received this month's gorgeous bouquet thanks to Sweet Pea Florist.

The Chelsfield Community Cafe runs twice a month and is based in Chelsfield Village, Village Hall (by the cricket club), based purely on local volunteers it brings the young and elderly together for a couple of hours to interact with each other, chat, & have fun, an idea bought to fruition when lockdown was eased to help those with loneliness and isolation.

Vert It has proven very popular with friendships blossoming, all kinds of entertainment now being added (the Bromley Carers Choir, were there singing when I surprised them) and of course let's not forget the delicious homemade cakes that get donated to.

The Chelsfield Community Cafe runs 2.30- 4.30 every 1st and 3rd Wednesday of the month.

There is also a pick and drop off service for those who may need it. (Message me if you would like more information).

I have been a few times to the CCC and my heart warms seeing the animated conversations, the buzz of chatter and enjoyment on the faces of whom frequent, for some this is the highlight of their week.

Congratulations to everyone involved with this lovely community cafe.

If you would like more information then do drop me a message.

Local History Group - Escape

Pam Preedy presented a well illustrated talk on Bromley's role in supporting the Belgian refuges of WWI with many contemporary newspaper pictures.

On the 28th June, 1914, the shot that killed

Archduke Franz Joseph of Austria and his wife Sophie, echoed around the world from Sarajevo but went unreported in the Bromley & District Times which, as a local paper wrote about affairs of local interest and this event was too far away to be worthy of comment. Germany apparently feared an attack from France or Russia. They planned to invade neutral Belgium to the east and then swing round to attack France to the south-west. Britain leapt to defend their little ally.

The British Expeditionary Force were outnumbered by the Germans 3 to 1. They were forced to withdraw. Both sides dug themselves into trenches leading to the war of attrition.

Angry that the Belgians had slowed their progress, the Germans took revenge on the native population. As the Germans marched into Belgium, the people began to move out of their homes to escape the wrath of the soldiers.

From August, 1914, the refugees and wounded Belgian soldiers began arriving in England. They needed help; money, shelter and nourishment.

By the middle of September, there was a steady flow of Belgian refugees reaching Bromley. They continued to arrive in Folkestone and in other ports.

It was not just the refugees arriving in England, but also wounded Belgian soldiers. They needed help: Bromley was one of many places in England that welcomed them. In November 1914, it was estimated that there were about 300 refugees in Bromley with a similar number across Beckenham by April. 1915. Homes were either offered, or 'taken' for them. Large homes were preferred to keep families and communities together. Mr & Mrs White offered their house. The Gorse for the refugees. It had been empty for six vears. 25 people aged from 12 months to 83 vears were housed there in November 1914.

Articles in the Chislehurst and Sidcup District Times comment on the comfort of the house and gifts of food, coal, and clothing, and money donations.

People were generous in their offers to lend and equip homes for the refugees

There was so much that the refugees needed; churches made their contribution e.g. the collection from St Joseph's Church, Plaistow Lane of £17 2s 4d went to the Belgian War Relief Fund.

Concerts were also held to raise money for the funds.

The Council was able to be generous and agreed that any houses taken over rent-free for the refugees would be free ' from all rates and taxes.'

Trades people offered help: the Hovis Bread Flour Co., Ltd sent enough flour 'to supply bread for the family of 29 refugees for one month, ' and 'a Beckenham baker had kindly arranged to make and deliver it free of charge.'

In December, 1914 it was announced that the children of Holmcroft School were devoting all spare time since the term began in September, to making articles of clothing for Belgian refugee children. The children from Keston School had written a kind letter and sent presents to the Belgian children in Haves House and had received a letter, in French, back from them thanking them for the gifts: "Nous apprécions vivement votre cadeau."

Father Dams, a Belgian priest who worked among the refugees in Beckenham had brought a school for Belgian children into being. He realised the necessity when these children went back to their own country of speaking their own language.

And then it was time for them to leave, to be repatriated to their own country. The King of the Belgians needed them to return to rebuild their country and the British Government wanted them gone to be replaced by the repatriated soldiers. The aim was to get them to leave the country as quickly as possible.

The few that did stay integrated into British life - many married Britons they had met while in the country.

The refugees were initially greeted with open arms. There was a jubilant feeling of going to get 'the Bosche' and the 'plucky little Belgians' fitted into that narrative. It was often the case that if you didn't have a refugee staying with you, you knew someone who did. They were treated rather like pets.

Official records from the time estimate 250.000 Belgians refugees came to Britain during WW1. In some purpose-built villages they had their own schools. newspapers, shops, hospitals, churches, prisons and police. These areas were considered Belgian territory and run by the Belgian government. They even used the Belgian currency.

One such village was Elisabethville after the Queen of Belgium. It was established close to an armaments factory in 1916 in County Durham to house the workers. Elisabethville was very much a separate entity, fenced off from nearby Birtley village. There was very little mixing between the Belgians and local inhabitants of Birtley and a certain amount of jealousy from the local population in Birtley who saw the Belgians enjoying a better lifestyle than them.

After the Armistice in November 1918, the Belgian workforce began returning home, although some did remain and settle in the North East. Elisabethville was then used to house the growing population of Birtley who were surprised at the luxurious accommodation which included electricity. Belgian street names were replaced by English ones and the name Elisabethville fell into disuse. Today only a few signs of the original village remain, these being a shop, the hospital, part of a factory and the cemetery that contains a number of Belgian headstones.

Do you worry care about environmental issues and wonder what you can do about it practically? That was a question I posed to myself last month when I was leading a study group at church about creation and our responsibility to care for it. My response has been to follow up a venture I first became aware of a couple of years ago when I lived in Tunbridge Wells. That venture is a Repair Café. You may have heard of them and seen the Repair shop tv programme which is based on a similar idea but on a more complicated scale. Repair Cafes have been set up in many locations across the world with a mission to reduce the amount of our resources that we throw away into landfill by repairing items that are uneconomical to repair if they were repaired commercially. An example would be a kettle. If the on off switch broke, then most of us would simply throw it away and buy a new one but if we could get a simple repair done, we may well be able to extend its life by many years.

There are repair cafes locally and one has just opened in Sevenoaks. I am keen to get one up and running in Orpington and now I am searching for a few people to help me get it started. If you are passionate about environmental issues and want to reduce our waste, then you may be the person I am looking for. If you have skills in Finance, Law, managing volunteers or human resources then that would be an added bonus. Also. if you can think of someone you know who fits the bill then please mention it to them. Please do get in touch with me if you are interested in helping or would like to know more. There is an international affiliation of repair cafes and their website is https://www.repaircafe.or a/en/

Today, we launched a consultation to seek your views on expanding the Ultra Low Emission Zone (ULEZ) London-wide. The Mayor has asked TfL to consult on these proposals and to begin to develop a longer-term smart road user charging system to address the triple challenges facing London of toxic air pollution, the climate emergency and traffic congestion.

The consultation will run for 10 weeks until 29 July and asks a number of questions on the proposals for the London-wide ULEZ. If a larger zone was introduced, it would have a transformative effect by the end of 2023. It is estimated that the number of cars not meeting the tough ULEZ emission standards each day would fall from 160,000 to 46,000 and number of vans from 42,000 to 26,000.

We are also proposing to make it easier for people with non-compliant vehicles to pay the charge and not get caught out by removing the annual £10 per vehicle Auto Pay registration fee, while ensuring fines for nonpayment remain an effective deterrent by increasing the penalty by £20, or £10 if paid within 14 days. Additionally, we want to hear your views on how we shape the future of road user charging in the capital.

There are a number of documents to help you and your constituents to respond to the consultation. For an overview of the proposals there is a short video and a short consultation brochure. More detailed information is also available including an Integrated Impact Assessment report which has been prepared to identify the likely significant impacts of the consultation proposals and identify possible mitigating measures where appropriate.

We want to encourage you to have your say through the consultation questionnaire about the way forward to achieving a clean, green and healthy future London. Please also contact us should you want more information. We are also creating a toolkit for you to easily share information with any of your stakeholders which we will be sharing this with you next week.

We hope that you will give your views via the Have Your Say website. You can also call us on 0343 222 1155 or email us at cleanairyourview@tfl.gov .uk with your response.

We will also be in touch soon to offer briefings on this consultation. Please do let us know whether you would be interested in attending a briefing session and don't hesitate to get in touch should you have any questions.

Bromley Arts Festival

Bromley Arts Festival: A fresh new Festival to showcase the Arts scene throughout July

Even as the Queen's Platinum Jubilee celebrations reach their high point, waiting in the wings to make summer even better is the Bromley Arts Festival, which aims to celebrate every arts event in the London borough throughout July.

To date, over 80 dates have been registered, including theatre, dance, comedy, music, art, and poetry.

Already a culturally abundant borough, Bromley has its own amphitheatre, several theatres, a strong musical heritage crowned by its association with David Bowie, numerous art societies and creatives, poets, dance groups and more. A large, diverse, and green borough, all of the borough is being brought together in this festival, from the town centre with its Churchill Theatre, often used to launch national touring shows, to Biggin Hill, the famous wartime air base and home to arts events at its Memorial Museum, to Beckenham, home of the Bethlem Art Gallery, and to Penge, a noted destination with eye-catching street art in the form of marvellous murals. From the 1st of July and Breaking The Code debuting at Bromley's Little Theatre, to the 31st and Magpie Dances presenting Global Moves and Grooves - A Festival of Dance and Culture, there is something for everyone in Bromley this July.

Festival information is being shared through our new website, social media, posters, leaflets and by our taking the festival to the media. The ambition? To bring people locally and from far and wide to love the diverse, busy, and exciting arts offer that Bromley has all year round, but, specially, this time, in one glorious, summer month.
