The Dipper

Before getting to the subject of this month's piece I'd like to mention an article I saw on the BBC website this morning. For those interested in reading the whole article the link is:

https://www.bbc.co.uk/ne ws/science-environment-63244353

The title is "Climate Change: Summer 2022 smashed dozens of UK records" and details the data collected across the country during the past summer we enjoyed - or not as the case may be. It seems that 56 of 109 weather stations that have been recording data for more than 50 years recorded their highest temperatures ever during the summer. Maximum temperature records are usually broken by narrow margins but during 2022 the margins were, by meteorological standards extraordinarily large. The largest margin was recorded at Bramham in West Yorkshire where the record was broken by 6.3 °C while the maximum temperature recorded was 40.3 °C at Coningsby where the record was broken by 1.6 °C. The maiority of broken records occurred in Northern England although records were also broken in Wales and Scotland, 80% of the new records broke previous highest ever temperatures that were set since the turn of the millennium meaning that records are being broken at an increasingly fast rate. All of this points to climate change. I hear and know people who claim that the climate has always been changing queue the example of the ice ages only a few tens of thousands of years ago. All true of course. But these arguments often contain an ounce of truth and a ton of lies making them all the easier to swallow for those that want easy excuses. The important point here is the rate at which things change. Historically change would occur in literally, a glacial manner! This change has now accelerated tremendously since the start of the industrial revolution and particularly in the last century and is now becoming difficult to ignore. The change is happening so fast that the natural world cannot accommodate those changes.

So, this month I want to talk about a bird that I have only seen once and that was while visiting friends on the Wales/England border on a stream known as Whitebrook that leads into the Wye valley. This bird is the Dipper (Cinclus cinclus). It seems that dippers cannot usually be seen anywhere in the south east of England preferring all other parts of the country and home nations. But, as I mentioned in August when I wrote about the wheatear. I am now including birds that I have seen but not necessarily in Chelsfield, So, this bird is a stocky, long legged bird which looks somewhat like a giant wren or female blackbird (i.e essentially dark brown) albeit with a white breast although it is actually related to the thrush family. Indeed one of the colloquial names for this bird is the 'water blackbird'. Other names include the wee water hen (Ireland), water crake, water ouzel and water colly. This bird's life consists of dipping (hence the name) under the water of small streams looking for insects. It's normal above surface behaviour is to find a small boulder and bob up and down in a similar fashion to that of a wagtail - potentially also leading to its eponymous name. It's a hardy bird and will dip below the surface of ice fringed streams all day long earning a living off of fresh water shrimps, other insects and even small fish and their eggs.

Cameras sited below the surface show the hunting technique of this bird consists of walking over the riverbed against the water flow while resisting its own cork-like buoyancy while searching for food. While under water, they are covered by a thin, silvery film of air, due to small bubbles trapped on the surface of the plumage. Despite dippers association with water they are very 'terrestrial bird' like and do not have the usual water-fowl type features of such birds, for instance they do not have webbed feet. However, they do have solid bones (unlike typical birds that have hollow bones to reduce weight and aid flying) to help reduce their buoyancy and sharp claw like feet to hold onto rocks on the stream-bed as well as a nasal flap to prevent them from drowning. Another adaption allows their blood to maintain a high concentration of oxygen enabling them to remain under water for up to 30 seconds.

These birds are dependant on clear, unpolluted water and secure nests close to water. As such they have become threatened and even in the past hunted. In both Germany and Scotland at one time they were hunted until the beginning of the 20th century because it was believed that they eat the eggs of salmon and therefore threatened future generations of salmon which were obviously beneficial to the recreational fishing industry. Despite this history and the rather restrictive nature of this birds environmental requirements there are potentially up to 20,000 breeding pairs in Britain and it is not considered to be 'at risk'.

Dial-a-Ride

Now we have lost the R7 bus which stops at the 5 Bells. I'm surprised that not more people use the Dial-a-Ride service. This is a free service run by TfL (Transport for London) and can be booked 7 days a week from 09.00am to 6.00pm. I phoned after having knee surgery to ask whether I would be eligible and gave my address, yes they said, as long as it is in the Bromley postcode area, BR

I am a pensioner and now regularly use this service once or twice a month. I get picked up at my door at a time I have requested and taken wherever I want to go, Tesco's, Sainsbury's, The Library, The Market, you name it.

When you book your travel they ask you where you would like to go and how long until you want a lift home. Easy. I usually give myself one and a half to two hours, and when I get back to where I was dropped, as close as possible to where I have been, the little red bus is always waiting. I expect everyone has seen the bus in and around Orpington. Lovely helpful drivers. And it is back to my front door. Hope to see you on the bus one day.

More R7 Thoughts

In talking to R7 drivers recently, they said that TfL were thinking of rerouting the bus to avoid the Village, because of blockages caused by school drop offs ...and longer parking for socializing. One driver refused to move when blocking the bus. The bus would go on to Hewitts roundabout and come back and park for a rest break next to the new double roundabout.

If they are going to do this, they might as well come back via the Bo Peep and park by the old bus stop.

I am sure the Village Hall car park could accommodate the 5 or so cars that park by Ivy Cottages...for a small consideration.

Two other thoughts... has anyone noticed that the essential loos have gone from the Recreation Ground? Could be significant.

And to avoid congestion if the Hewitts plan doesn't go ahead, what about making the double roundabout entry to the Village one way?

That's all for now!

Local Night-time Car Racing

Many of you may be aware over the last few months of night time car racing around Hewitts roundabout and Court road. These have been usually at weekends but recently also on a Friday.

Apparently the police have been involved, but one problem has been who has responsibility for these roads as they are on county boarders.

The Chelsfield Village Society has been trying to ensure that the problem is dealt with and learned that last Friday evening, a Sevenoaks councillor who lives nearby, took members of the Kent Police up to the Hewitts roundabout via the back roads to avoid the congestion.

They found a big gathering of around 100 'boy racers' and collected evidence that hopefully will identify the organisers together with any future planned meeting dates.

The current agreement is that the future responsibility for the monitoring of the situation is that the Met Police will be covering the Hewitt's Roundabout, Court Road and the lane to the Bo-Peep, and Kent Police will be responsible for the M25 spur road up to Hewitt's and the road to Badgers Mount. This is not actually on the County boundary lines but an appropriate division.

Indian Celebration in the Village Hall

A colourful Indian market , Anandamela, attracted a lot of interest from hungry cricketers as it coincided with one of our team's home matches. We purchased some tasty food for our supper.

We were also very pleased to welcome back our friends of the Bengali Association of Bromley to celebrate Durga

Puja over 3 days. The hall looked stunning.

Local History Group - Lyulph Lubbock

Lyulph Lubbock, Lord Avebury, entertained us with a lavishly illustrated talk focusing on the houses of the Lubbock family. Although the family has spread around the world with a Texan town bearing the Lubbock name, he concentrated on their Kent properties.

In 1808 banker Sir John William Lubbock. 2nd Baronet, purchased the High Elms estate. This was rebuilt by his son, the 3rd Baronet, also named John William and head of the family bank. He took over the estate in 1840 and rebuilt the house in 1844. The various footpaths on the estate are enhanced by old bricks from the previous house making them usable in all weathers. He was a scientist, mathematician and astronomer and was awarded the medal of the Royal Society. He did work on tide charts and star maps and has groups of craters on the moon named after him. He was treasurer of the Royal Society and of the great Exhibition at Crystal Palace. He became the first vice chancellor of the University of London and High Sherriff of Kent. The house became filled with specimens from around the world and was occasionally open to the viewing public. In 1864 30,000 to 40,000 people visited the family race course causing much chaos as the carriages drove from the nearest station at Beckenham. He visited the pioneer of early photography, Louis Daguerre, bringing home some cameras and experimented photographing the High Elms property, producing probably the earliest outdoor Daguerrotype taken in England.

His son, also John, became the fourth baronet in 1865. He was a true polymath and later became the first Lord Avebury. He had a huge range of interests and remained a steadfast friend to his neighbour Charles Darwin, being himself a respected author of science books based on his own research. On hearing of imminent development at the prehistoric site of Avebury he immediately bought the village and saved the ancient remains for the nation.

As an MP he piloted 31 Acts of Parliament through the House of Commons, among them,

The Shop Hours Act,

Wild Birds Protection Act, Ancient Monuments Protection Act,

Open Spaces Act

Bank Holidays Act. The national holidays created by this latter Act became known as "St Lubbock's Days".

John was at one time Liberal MP for Maidstone and Kit Coty's House near Maidstone survived as a result of his protection. He restored and lived in Kingsgate Castle in Broadstairs. His first wife, Ellen, was a published scientist. Almost unheard of for women at that time.

In 1938 the High Elms estate was sold to Kent County Council and the house later became a nurses' training centre. In 1965 the estate was transferred to the new borough of Bromley. The land then became public open space, but in 1967 the mansion burnt down. In 1947 to 1981 the family moved to the Clock roof and inserting an House, converted from the stables.

Various members of this large family were associated with properties throughout Kent, namely The Rookery, Oakley House, Downe. Bassetts in Starts Hill, Farnborough, Lammas at Foxbury and Leesons, both Chislehurst and a little further afield, North Cray Place and Emmetts at Ide Lammas car, and a Hill. Emmetts, thought of as being too small was expanded by lifting the extra floor

The Lubbock family boasts many high achievers. Among them are an engineer who worked with Whittle on the development of the jet engine, actresses, musicians, a writer, a surgeon, England team sportsmen, a pilot who was awarded the MC, a racing driver who was involved with the director of Rolls Royce who founded engineering scholarships and whose wife was involved with the denazification of Europe after WWII.

During the break for refreshments we were able to look through an enormous collection of photographs of the family and their houses. It was agreed that the group would welcome a return visit from Lyulph to hear more about his illustrious family.

Chelsfield's Casualties of World War Two

In this month of Remembrance there are two servicemen to commemorate, eighty years after they lost their lives in the service of their country. One is on the war memorial in St Martin's, the other is not but is buried in the churchyard after dying on active service.

Frederick Craycraft

A poppy cross has been placed on the grave of Frederick Craycraft at the annual Remembrance Service for many years even though he is not listed on the war memorial. The splendid gravestone explains why:

In Loving Memory of MY DARLING SON FREDERICK W. J. CRAYCRAFT Who was called to sleep November 1942. Aged 20

While serving in the Merchant Navy
A light is from our household gone
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant at our hearth
Which never can be filled

Also His beloved father Who served in the Great War As A.B. in the Royal Navy

Frederick Craycraft doesn't appear in the Commonwealth War Grave Commission records and the Civil Registration Death Index shows he died in the district of West Ham, Essex. Unfortunately I haven't been able to find any information about his service record. He was born in the Dartford area in 1922 and his mother's maiden name was Dighton; further research shows a Patience Dighton married a Frederick J Craycraft in the Dartford area in the September quarter of 1921. In 1911 Patience Dighton is living with her parents William and Fanny on Court Lodge Farm, and in 1939 is a widow living at 2 Eden Villas, Elm Road, Green Street Green, hence why her son is buried at Chelsfield even though he died in Essex. According to the 'Lives of the First World War' research site, father Frederick James did indeed serve as an Able Seaman throughout WWI on board HMS Indomitable, including at the Battle of Jutland. He was invalided out in 1919.

David Marr

The information given for the cause of death given for David Marr was inconsistent and it is only in the last few weeks that I have discovered why. 901227 Gunner David Terrence Murray Marr was a Driver in Charge in the 97th (The Kent Yeomanry) Field Regiment. In the Commonwealth War Grave Commission records he is reported as dying on 14 November 1942 aged 22, and in his service record he is first noted as reported missing on 29 June 1942, then listed as a Prisoner of War in Camp No. 154 in Italy. However, a later entry says he is still a Prisoner of War on 16 April 1943, duty location Western Desert, but a further note says he died 'At Sea' with no date. His probate record from 1944 says he died on or since 14 November 1942 on active war service

Pam Preedy's excellent 'Military Ancestors' site gave details from a newspaper entry from the Bromley & Kentish Times of 26th February 1943. The report says that David Marr joined up in April 1939 and went to France in September. eventually taking part in the retreat to Dunkirk where he was evacuated to England. A few months later, in May 1942, he sailed for the Middle East. In heavy fighting he was captured by the Italians. He was reported missing in June 1942 but news had arrived that he was a prisoner of war.

It is not unusual to find little information about a casualty of World War II as some of the records are still closed or only available to close family members on request. While researching for this article I used that old faithful (but very unacademic) method of Googling David Marr's name and regiment number, and found the uncomfortable truth - his cause of death, along with 800 other POWs. had been kept secret by the UK Government for 50 years, and was only made public by the MOD in 1996 after lobbying from relatives and historians.

It seems Marr had been a prisoner of war and in November 1942 was one of 814 Allied POWs ordered into the hold of the cargo ship SS Scillin at Tripoli, Libya, to be transported to Italy. According to some reports the ship was only built to take 300 in the hold and conditions on board were therefore appalling. The ship set sail on 13 November and on the night of 14 November was attacked and sunk by the British Sclass submarine HMS Sahib. There was little chance of survival for those in the hold and only 27 POWs and 34 crew were rescued. Sadly David Marr was not one of them

Royal Navy submarine commanders had been ordered not to attack enemy civilian ships on the route from North Africa to Italy. However, Lt John Bromage, the commander of HIM Sahib claimed that he thought the Scillin must be carrying troops as it had no lights, did not respond to warning shots and seemed to be on course for North Africa. Other records at the Naval inquiry that followed showed the Sahib was specifically told to target the Scillin. It is not clear why this information and the exact circumstances around the death of the POWs was keep hidden for so long, there is speculation that it was to prevent the disclosure of how the enemy signals code had been broken. The most difficult part of this story is that the Allied commanders knew that the SS Scillin was carrying POWs, but had to target some ships that were, in order to cover up that they had prior knowledge of the ships' cargo through intelligence. For the greater good...

David Marr is remembered on the Alamein Memorial in Egypt. He was the son of Frances Rose & Terence Murray Marr, and lived with them at 4 Yew Tree Cottages, Chelsfield, On the 1939 National Register father Terence is listed as a 'public works contractor's labourer'. From the newspaper article previously referred to. David's parents were under the impression he was a prisoner of war long after he had actually died. They would have passed away long before the truth about his death was known.

Remembrance Sunday

Please come and join us at our Remembrance Service at 10:45am on Sunday 13 November at St Martin's when we will remember these men along with the others from our parish and further afield who have given their lives for their country. After the service we will process to the war graves in the churchyard to lay poppy crosses (weather permitting), all are welcome to join.

The Friends of the Princess Royal University Hospital

The Princess Royal University Hospital is the main hospital for the Bromley area. The PRUH, as the hospital is known, is part of the King's College Hospital NHS Foundation Trust. The Friends of the PRUH aims to improve the lives of patients and staff in the hospital. The Friends is a registered charity run entirely by volunteers and raises funds to support their aims.

Recently the NHS Trust invested a large sum of money on refurbishing Medical Wards 1 and 2 at the PRUH to make these wards dementia friendly. The changes, to reduce confusion and distress in patients, include use of bold and contrasting colours, use of non-slip flooring and artwork. The Friends contributed a substantial sum of £15,000 per ward towards this refurbishment and also recently donated 22 activity boxes and CD players for patients. These boxes were allocated to each inpatient ward and contain a number of activities for patients to eniov includina Sudoku. crosswords, playing cards, and games such as Draughts and Dominoes. The Pandemic was a very stressful and busy time for everyone at the hospital. The Friends supported the staff at this time by donating meals, snacks, fresh fruit, chocolates, hand creams. body lotion and small tokens of appreciation such as mugs which were donated to the staff hub at the hospital. This is a short highlight of the work done by The Friends.

The Friends fund their work by various means. As well as receiving legacies and regular donations from individuals and organisations, such as local Rotary Clubs, they usually raise money by holding various fund raising activities including sales stalls, charity events and the sale of Christmas cards. If you should wish to help or support their work, please get in touch via their website
