Aaron's Rod

I recently spent some time with friends taking hikes around Mid-Sussex looking at villages and churches that my ancestors frequented, some back to the 1600s. One such hike led to a pub called 'The Royal Oak' in a village called Wineham. Although not definitive, there is some evidence suggesting my 3rd Gt Grandfather Thomas Knapp ran this pub in the 1820s. It is one of those pubs that make you feel like you've just gone though a time-slip back 200 years and I imaging that Thomas would instantly have recognised the place – see photo.

their bodies – they are only holding onto their lunch with those front legs. The rear legs are known as 'prolegs' and cannot clasp. The question arises, how did so many larvae arrive on

However, the point of this intro is that during one of these walks across Mid-Sussex we found a leaf with 18 sawfly larvae munching away on it. These are not true caterpillars, the name belonging to butterflies and moths but in modern parlance the name appears to be acceptable for use with sawflies too. Like most caterpillars, these larvae only have 3 true legs which is why these bugs have a characteristic 'S' shape to a single leaf at the same time. They would strip this leaf in an hour so they must have just arrived. I wonder if they had a caterpillar conga line? Each larvae following the one in front? In some species these lines have consisted of hundreds of larvae. A Victorian naturalist once tried creating a circle of larvae to see how long it would take for the leader to realise its error. They continued to march for over a week!

Anyway, onto Aaron's rod (Verbascum thapsus or Common Mullein). This year, in early spring I noticed a weed which did not look like the usual run-of-the-mill thing you'd find in your garden and decided to leave it so see what it would develop into. As time drew on it became large and taller until in early summer it reached the impressive height of about 2 m (7 foot) with large spreading leaves on the lower reaches and small yellow flowers growing close to a tall central spine with smaller off-shoots (see photo). Such is the rather imposing sight of this plant that it bears the name Aaron's rod through Old Testament biblical references. Aaron was the brother of Moses and both had sticks endowed with miraculous powers. Also, almost as miraculously, my ancestor Thomas, the pub owner mentioned above, had two grandchildren, one named Moses and the other Aaron, the latter being my Gt Grandfather. I guess my family lost its ecclesiastical inclination over the subsequent generations! One Old Testament story tells of how on one occasion Aaron addressed the Pharaoh of Egypt and wanting to impress him threw his rod to the floor where it turned into a serpent. The Pharaoh's sorcerers then did the same with their rods to show they were not impressed but Aaron's serpent swallowed them all. The more relevant miracle to this story is that this rod had the ability to produce buds, blossoms and bare fruit overnight. The plant has a staff like appearance allowing it to be associated with the biblical rod when in flower.

Back in Britain this plant had historical uses and prior to the introduction of cotton a white downy coating on the leaves was collected and used as candlewick or the whole plant could even be used as a flare. This is reflected by the old folk-name 'candlewick plant'. While walking in Sussex we frequently saw this plant, particularly in cemeteries while looking for long-lost ancestors. The plant is biennial although I did not notice it the previous year despite growing vegetable in the very same patch. The tall spike like structure of the plant is not present in the first year as only a low rosette is grown – in a similar manner to parsnips. The plant is mildly poisonous but is a favourite of a moth that shares its more common name: the Mullein Moth. This moth, when not flying looks like a piece of splintered wood so I would have thought it looks fairly obvious while feeding on its name-sake. So much for adaptive evolution.

While researching this piece I found that D H Lawrence had written a lesser known book by the title "Aaron's rod" in 1922 which follows the exploits of an Englishman travelling in Europe after WW1 with his flute – hence Aaron's rod. Many reviews were not complimentary so unless you're a huge Lawrence fan, probably best to miss this one out but I did wonder if the book name was mere coincidence or whether he was thinking of the plant. He was bought up in Nottingham close to the countryside, had friends that lived on a farm and an appreciation of the natural world for his entire life so it's not unreasonable to think that he knew of this wild plant that was so conspicuous due to its size alone.

Mutterings From The Millers

All the straw has now been baled but unfortunately the results for the oats were appalling. Thin grains with very little weight to them resulted in the worst the harvest we have known. This year we have had too much rain at the wrong time and not enough sunshine. Farmers are renown for moaning about the weather but we have noticed over the last ten years, weather patterns have changed completely. We write about this often as you know. Each harvest income has steadily got worse. So it is with much regret, that we are not going to grow cereals in the future.

A combination of factors has brought about this decision. Steve's health is not too good and is unable to get about easily, cost of fertiliser has gone up 70%, chemicals, to try and keep the crop clean, have risen about 20%, diesel doubled in price, and the weather has made the cost of production out weigh the income. As you can imagine, this has been a very, very difficult decision and we have tried all ways to avoid this but we cannot continue losing news. Will finish as usual with a weather quote but just to say that a couple of swallows are still flying around and thrilled to see a lesser white throat in the garden recently. Tawny owls have been calling too. No sign of the weasel though.

October usually is a month of falling leaves and falling temperatures, when the first black ice of winter can appear. A large number of foggy days in October indicates a hard winter. If the leaves wither on the branches in late autumn, instead of beginning to fall in October as normal, an extra cold winter is due.

The whole farm has now been planted with grass for hay and haylage which will be sold through a merchant but at least we are still farming, just. Does anyone want a combine? Needless to say we have the combine, trailers and drill for sate, it will be heartbreaking when they go.

We will not be writing to you all regularly now but obviously will send in the odd report. Thank you to all the readers who often tell us how much they enjoy reading the farm

Panic Buying – Why do we do it?

As I write this month, Petrol Stations in the local area are empty, queues of over an hour form when there is a tanker delivery and the situation seems serious.

The government are insisting that there is plenty of fuel and that it is only the distribution that is a problem but this has not stopped a rush of panic buying and chaos on the roads and around the petrol stations. If the government are telling the truth then there is absolutely no need for all this chaos.

Supply chains are based on predicted behaviour and if we had not decided to go and panic buy then there would be enough fuel for everyone but we just can't seem to stop ourselves from doing it. Think about toilet rolls last year! Why actually makes us panic buy?

Psychotherapist Nick Blackburn said people are trying to “solve” their anxiety by buying supplies, but when they get to the pumps, they're likely to experience more anxiety because items are running low. Then there's the added stress of being criticised or hearing snarky comments by others for doing it – in the forecourt or all over social media. “That's not the way to make fearful people feel better,” Blackburn told HuffPost UK.

Hansa Pankhaniaa therapist of 25 years and member of the British Association for Counselling and Psychotherapy (BACP), believes panic buying is also driven by helplessness, fear and loss of control. When people panic-buy it's a “gesture”, she said – they're doing something to help themselves in an otherwise helpless situation. When we have no control over the bigger picture, we crave control in our “micro world” – our home and daily routines. And in this case, people are doing it by buying up supplies.

So, the message: avoid panic buying but try not to scroll or share scaremongering posts on social media either. In the next few weeks only buy fuel if you are really going to need it and hopefully supplies will return to normal.

The Well Hill Black Fox

away when we appeared.

A couple of weeks ago one Saturday morning, we at Well Hill neighbourhood had a black fox come to visit. He was very tame and seemed used to being around people. I guessed he was hungry so I gave him Tuna pasta which he ate! Then for the next 6 hours he curled up on our sun lounge and slept. The Fox did the rounds visiting other neighbours nearby, resting in the shade of gardens.

After a while on WhatsApp I heard that foxy had escaped from 2nd chance rescue home at Crockenhill. John, who runs the home came to capture the fox without success on more than one occasion however on the Tuesday the fox was caught in a cage in our neighbour Trevor's garden and taken back to the rescue home.

Apparently his name is Ember and has a brother called Ash who was missing him.

We've had an interesting time with wildlife this summer, we fed two Robins from our hands, and saw a total of 5 various sized grass snakes, one of which was dragged from a bush by a magpie, much to our surprise. The magpie flew

Chelsfield & Well Hill Produce Show 2022

Up until 2015 the Chelsfield & Well Hill Produce Show was always a successful and enjoyable local village event, then, due to lack of organisational support and reduction in exhibit numbers, it was decided to take a break for a year or two.

Well, 6 years later we have a new core group of residents who have shown an enthusiastic interest in bringing the Produce Show back to life, with the first show in September 2022.

If anyone is interested in joining the team we will need to plan, set up and run the show please contact either the Village Voice:
chelsfieldvillagevoice@mail.com

or me, Dan Sloan on:
07414 920920 or:

dansloan@chelsfield.org

For those who are not familiar with the way the Produce Show works here is a brief rundown.

A show schedule of classes will be sent out around February or March (this gives everyone plenty of time to plan the produce that they need to grow or the art/craft they wish to complete in time for the show). The schedule used in 2015 offered 58 classes listed under the following groups:

Flower Arrangements
Flowers
Vegetables
Fruit
Wine & Beer
Country Fare

Handicrafts
Miscellany
Childrens Classes

However, it will be up to the new organising group to decide on the 2022 schedule.

The exhibitors set up in the morning, judging takes place around midday, the show is opens to the public in the afternoon with Prize Giving late afternoon.

We look forward to hearing from you if you are as keen as we are to revive this traditional and creative village event.

Community Day - Brown's School

On a beautiful day with blue sky and just a whisper of white cloud the Brown's School Community Day began on Friday 24th

September with the school minibus rolling out at 9.15 to drop off the first group of students to their destination that will see them help others in the Community. By 10.15 approximately all 90 students were in their place doing their small bit to help others in various jobs around people's houses, bus stops, pubs and community hall. As I went around checking to see that everything was okay and that they all had the necessary equipment for the jobs they were doing I saw staff and students washing cars, cleaning patios, moving logs, cutting branches, painting bus stops, clearing gardens, helping out in the "Five Bells" and "Bo Peep" and even cleaning some silver !!. All seemed to be happy at work and hopefully learning new skills and developing their communication skills at the same time.

After the round-up of students it was back at school to enjoy an afternoon of fun with a bouncy castle, Sumo suits and challenge tunnel as well as enjoying a tasty Bar B Q, staffed by the Bromley Rotarian Society. The students and staff sat down to a tasty meat feast with salad, relishes and sauces at the ready, - also with vegetarian options. I was glad to see some of the adults that we had helped in the morning come and join us in the afternoon as well as many parents and friends of the students themselves. In fact I think it was the largest crowd we have ever had in the school grounds in this our 8th annual Community Day event.

Can I once again thank all of those in the Chelsfield Community who allow us to enter their homes, Community Centre, Pubs and fields so that our students can do their bit. Can I also thank the Rotarians who come every year to stage the Bar B Q so well and deliver an excellent service. Lastly may I thanks all the parents who came in the afternoon, your support is always welcome and fully appreciated.

Community Day will be back at the end of the academic year July 2022 when once again we will be helping others in Chelsfield in a charitable way. If you would like us to help out at your place of residence at that time please do not hesitate to contact Brown's School for a brief chat.

Many Thanks Again to One and All.

The Chelsfield Unveils £400K Transformation

The Chelsfield, an iconic community pub located at the heart of the Chelsfield has reopened following a £400K investment by independent pub operators Punch Pubs & Co. Experienced Management Partner Nick Ranhem has taken the helm with the help of Manager Mike Tsirogiannis.

This significant investment has breathed new life into the well-loved community pub, with a refreshed look inside and out. The impressive building's original charm and character have been enhanced, with it now boasting an eclectic mix of comfortable furniture, warm oak finishes and unique pub accents.

Whether it be the cosy lounge, a chair by a roaring fire or the relaxed dining room, the Chelsfield offers the perfect backdrop for an authentic pub experience. The art deco style perfectly complements the double-height ceilings, original coving and cornices, as well as reinstating many of its original and unique features.

The investment has also maximised the pub's large outdoor space, with a variety of areas for guests to enjoy. The new south-facing sun terrace, decked with plenty of seating, is an idyllic spot for dining late into the evening. As well as this, the patio and heated pergola provide a perfect outdoor space to be enjoyed all year round.

When speaking about the investment, Management Partner Nick says, "We are so proud to be reopening the Chelsfield that looks better than ever. It has been amazing to welcome the community back to the pub once again, and the feedback we have had has been overwhelming. It has been great to hear so many of their stories about the Chelsfield, and Mike, the team, and I are excited to get to know them and make many more memories here."

Operations Director Robin Belither says, "We are thrilled with what our investment has created here at the Chelsfield. This is a true community pub that means so much to locals. We've enjoyed getting to know the community throughout the project, and it has been fantastic to speak to and see so many of them

"This is a unique and characterful building, and we are proud to have reinstated its iconic identity whilst bringing something new for guests to enjoy. We are confident that alongside Nick, Mike and the team, this well-loved pub will remain at the very heart of its community for many years to come."

The Chelsfield has reopened with a delicious food menu, with an array of quintessentially British dishes and specials. Good, honest home-cooked food, coupled with an extensive drinks menu, including quality cask ales, cracking local beers and carefully curated cocktails, as well as an expertly selected wine list that has been created to match a classic pub dining experience.
